

Learning through Drama

A Workshop for Teachers, Special Educators Professionals & Parents

Drama is a fantastic way to allow children, teenagers and adults to communicate and connect with one another and open up a sense of play and build confidence. Various games and exercises are used to help people of all ages to lose inhibitions and work together. A sense of trust is built within the classroom while playing these games.

The workshop creates a safe environment for children and adults to explore and express themselves by creating an awareness of the world we inhabit. Theatre Games and improvisations will be used to build children's confidence and allow children to respond to one another and work together. Theatre establishes its own boundaries. With the rules of the games, teachers can gain an understanding of how to control a class of children while allowing them the freedom to explore and create.

In conclusion, the workshop will provide an arena within which children and adults can learn to understand and trust one another and gain a sense of achievement and pride in creating their own work both individually and as a team, while having fun!

About the Facilitator

Melisa Ramadan has a First Class degree in Drama from the University of East Anglia, UK. She has extensively worked with Teachers and Children in the UK using Drama in practical workshops as well as classroom settings.

Who can participate?

- Teachers
- Parents
- Professionals
- Special Educators

Dates: Available from 25th of October 2009 to 10th December 2009

For registrations please contact:

Ananya Resource Centre, PRAVARA Educational Trust
1-2-593/26/A, Lane 4, Street 4, Gagan Mahal
Hyderabad 500 029, Andhra Pradesh, India
Phone: 0091 40 4016 0508 Mobile: 0091 98485 13192
Website: www.arc.org.in Email: info@arc.org.in